The Globalization Program Cultural Heritage and Sustainable Development

The Globalization Program is an innovative program which addresses globalization and its economic, social, environmental and cultural implications and consequences with an interdisciplinary and multicultural approach.

Venetian and Italian Studies (Fall and Spring)

Venice is a world heritage city, with a great concentration of arts, architecture and history. However the city is also a living machine in a unique setting, based on water, which represents an alternative urban and social concept. The city offers the possibility of experiencing contemporary challenges of environmental and economic sustainability and the effects of global traveling, providing resources and opportunities of fieldwork for various kinds of courses, considering also its role as administrative capital of the most dynamic industrial region of Italy.

The following courses are offered every semester:

- Italian Contemporary History, Luca Pes, Venice International University
- History of Venice, Luca Pes, Venice International University
- History of Art and Architecture, Alessandra Pattanaro/Elena Svalduz, Università degli Studi di Padova
- Italian for Foreigners, beginners and intermediate levels

Cultural Heritage (Fall semester)

In the Fall semester the program focuses on Cultural Heritage, and in particular on Cultural Management, Innovation and Urban Cultural Policy. Today our perception of Cultural Heritage is changing amidst the rush of images and sights offered by an interactive world. Cultural Heritage is not just a list of monuments and buildings that are being preserved and safeguarded but it is about the connection and the bond built through conceptual threads and through the narrative that links them together.

The following courses are offered every Fall semester:

- Cultural Heritage and Globalization
Bruno Bernardi (Scientific Coordinator), Università Ca' Foscari Venezia
- Architectural and Urban Heritage in Contemporary Venice
Guido Zucconi (Scientific Coordinator), Università Iuav di Venezia
- Training in the UNESCO World Heritage Studies
Giorgio Gianighian (Scientific Coordinator), Università IUAV di Venezia
- Digital Tools for Humanities
Francesco Guerra, Università IUAV di Venezia

Sustainable Development (Spring semester)

In the Spring semester the program focuses on Sustainable Development, and in particular Environmental Management and the International Division of Labour. Environmental issues have gained center-stage in economic analysis and policy-making, and their urgency has opened new opportunities in terms of technological innovation and entrepreneurship.

The following courses are offered every Spring semester:

- Globalization, Environment and Sustainable Development
Ignazio Musu (Scientific Coordinator), Venice International University and Università Ca' Foscari
- Coastal Wetlands, Lagoons and Estuaries: Environmental Monitoring and Management
Curt Richardson / Sonia Silvestri, Duke University
- Cities, Global Change and Sustainable Development
Margherita Turvani, Università Iuav di Venezia
- International Management: Managing Global Value Chains
Stefano Micelli (Scientific Coordinator), Venice International University and Università Ca' Foscari

Further courses in the Globalization Program are taught by professors selected by the VIU Academic Council to represent each member university for one semester.
